ECONOMICS TODAY
Edited by Andrew Leake

The Economics Today series surveys contemporary headline topics in applied economics. Each book in the series is written by an expert in the field in a style that is fluently readable. It serves the student of introductory economic principles while also making the subject accessible to a more general reader. The series embraces the problem-solving skills of the new generation of students and stresses the importance of real-world issues and the significance of economic ideas.

ECONOMICS TODAY: EDITED BY ANDREW LEAKE

LABOUR RELATIONS

Frank Burchill

This book is a comprehensive introduction to the theory and practice of labour relations. Although based predominantly on the UK experience it raises and discusses general principles at a level which newcomers to the subject will readily understand. Labour relations in the United Kingdom have undergone considerable change in recent years. The sources of these changes are discussed in a way which also provides the reader with insights into the process of reform of trade unions. New labour relations practices, often characterised as 'Japanisation', are also analysed as well as the impact of international changes.

Frank Burchill is Professor and Director of the Centre for Industrial Relations at the University of Keele. He has considerable experience with both trade-union and management organisations and has been a member of the ACAS Panel of Arbitrators since 1975.

The Economics Today series surveys contemporary headline topics in applied economics. Each book in the series is written by an expert in the field in a style that is fluently readable. It serves the student of introductory economic principles while also making the subject accessible to a more general reader. The series embraces the problem-solving skills of the new generation of students and stresses the importance of real-world issues and the significance of economic ideas.
