OLD WINE IN NEW BOTTLES

By JAMES CONNOLLY

"Instead of divisions along the line of creeds we will see union along the lines of industry, and instead of all the petty Unions we will see the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union gathering all into One Big Union of Irish workers against the united front of the employers."

"NI SAOIRSE GAN SAOIRSE LUCHT OIBRE"

Irish Transport & General Workers' Union

(Established January, 1909)

AN IRISH UNION FOR IRISH WORKERS

THE LARGEST AND MOST EFFECTIVE UNION IN IRELAND - CREDIT BALANCE £100,000

It paid £260,000 in Dispute Benefit in Five Years—One Thousand Pounds a week continuously for 260 weeks—in fighting for better conditions.

James Connolly wrote of this Union:

"It found the workers of Ireland on their knees, and has striven to raise them to the erect position of manhood; it found them with all the vices of slavery in their souls, and it strove to eradicate these vices, and replace them with some of the virtues of free men; it found them with no other weapons of defence than the arts of the liar, the lick-spittle and the toady, and it combined them and taught them to abhor these arts and rely proudly on the defensive power of combination."

JOIN THE UNION THAT TAUGHT THE IRISH WORKERS HOW TO FIGHT
