

IN DEFENCE OF TRADE UNIONISM

JIM MORTIMER

“These rights – to organise and to bargain collectively – should be regarded as fundamental social rights derived from the need to redress the imbalance of power in the employment relationship.”

This publication is based on a Lecture given by Jim Mortimer on 26th February 1998.

The opening address was given by John Hendy QC.
The Lecture was held to celebrate the 10th Anniversary of the Institute of Employment Rights.

This publication, like all publications of the Institute, represents not the collective views of the Institute but only the views of the authors.
The responsibility of the Institute is limited to approving its publications as worthy of consideration within the labour movement.

WHAT IS THE INSTITUTE?

THE INSTITUTE OF EMPLOYMENT RIGHTS was launched on 28th February 1989. As a labour law "think tank", supported by the trade union movement its purpose is to provide research, ideas and detailed argument. In 1994 the Institute was granted charitable status.

The Institute has attracted wide and distinguished support. Among the membership are John Hendy QC, Professor Keith Ewing, Lord McCarthy, Sir Peter Pain, and the general secretaries of Britain's largest trade unions.

The results of the work of the Institute are published in papers and booklets. It also provides short articles, free of legal jargon, for trade union journals and other publications.

The Institute provides tools of analysis and debate for the trade union movement in the area of labour law. We are not a campaigning organisation.

The Institute does not assume that legal measures can offer ultimate solutions for political, economic and social problems. However, it recognises that law has a part to play in influencing the employment relationship, both individually and collectively.

Funding is from various sources, including subscriptions which entitle subscribers to a copy of all our new publications.

If you are interested in subscribing or would like to know more about the Institute, then contact us at 160 Falcon Road, London SW11 2LN, 0171 738 9511.
