A highly effective... measure progress step-by-step, has been devised for Breakthrough Books by the National Extension College, Britain's leading specialists in home study.

Chris Brewster is an industrial relations consultant, teacher and journalist, based in Cambridge. He acquired varied insights into industrial relations, working for the AUEW, the Commission on Industrial Relations and in the construction and air transport industries before a spell at Kingston Regional Management Centre.

Chris Brewster is co-author of Industrial Relations Training for Managers.

Acknowledgements

It would be impossible to acknowledge all the help I have had in writing this book. I learnt a lot from the great number of managers and union officials who have taken part in the training programmes I have run. I would like to thank a few people by name: Roger Oldcorn, who got me started; and two colleagues from Employment Relations Ltd, Anni Hollings, who was always ready to help me improve the text, and Janet Sellwood, who kept me organised. My thanks also go to Lynn and Rebecca, who kept it all in perspective.

UNDERSTANDING INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS

Pan Breakthrough books open the door to successful self-education. The series provides essential knowledge using the most modern self-study techniques.

Expert authors have produced clear explanatory texts on business subjects to meet the particular needs of people at work and of those studying for relevant examinations.

A highly effective learning pattern, enabling readers to measure progress step-by-step, has been devised for Breakthrough books by the National Extension College, Britain's leading specialists in home study.

Understanding Industrial Relations emphasizes the importance of management's role before explaining the involvement of unions and the State. The legal framework is shown in detail and later chapters examine industrial relations in practice, at the workplace and during negotiations.

The book is ideal for use on Institute of Industrial Management, Institute of Personnel Management and NEBSS courses and for all practising managers who carry industrial relations responsibilities.

the National Extension College.
